Relationships and sex education

Article 13: Every child must be free to say what they think and seek and receive information.

Our ground rules

In order to have a meaningful learning environment in which to operate, it is vital that all pupils should understand 'our ground rules' particularly for this particular topic. As with everything at St. Osmund's, respect towards ourselves and others is expected in all we do and all we say. Further to this, when working in RSE lessons, all pupils need to understand these key points:

- Relationships and sex education is a very important, if not the most important, section of work in a child's schooling.
- RSE has to be taught by law in all schools in Britain.
- Pupils are encouraged to watch, listen and explore topics in a safe, caring and sensible environment.
- Everyone is encouraged to be 'open' and honest when speaking about aspects this subject.
- Everyone has the right to talk and ask questions without ridicule, embarrassment or pressure.
- Sex is not a 'dirty' word or topic, nor should it be something we are afraid to talk about.
- The member of staff leading any lesson has the right to not answer any question or topic they feel is inappropriate in a class situation. This may then be dealt with in a one-to-one situation at an appropriate time.
- These expectations will be explained and revisited in lessons, as needed.
